

„The Great Jitters: PUDDING PANIC“: award-winning iOS game about a jelly in a haunted house now available for Mac!

BERLIN -- September 21st, 2011. Poor protagonist J. Jitters has no chance to relax: Indie game developer kunst-stoff from Berlin now releases the Mac version of their quirky action puzzle game on the Mac App Store. The critically acclaimed iOS version won the Pocketgamer Gold Award and the red dot design award. The game received excellent reviews and was on position 1 of the iPhone quality index as well as among the top 2011 games on metacritic.com.

In the Mac version of „The Great Jitters: PUDDING PANIC“, players also test their courage in 48 suspenseful levels and dive into four “beautiful 3D worlds” (appgefahren.de). The player leads an anxious blob of pudding through a spooky haunted house. The pudding has to find the way to the exit and evade scary monsters waiting in the dark. The only chance of survival is to scare the monsters back before the pudding quivers, shivers and faints from fear. The player fights evil witches, scary skeletons and rusty knights with an arsenal of weapons and traps...

Variations in game play -- including puzzle-solving, playing against the clock, unraveling labyrinths and winning treacherous races -- promise to keep the game fresh and inspiring throughout the whole ride and for players of any level.

The quirky game was released for the iPhone/iPad/iPod touch on the App Store in June 2011 and for PC in August 2011 on Little Indie.

The ambitious kunst-stoff team currently develops the next games of the „The Great Jitters“ series: a Racing Edition for iPhone/iPad and the diverting and competitive version for Facebook (Browser).

The Mac game costs 9,99 € (11,99 $) on the Mac App Store.
